

PETTIT+SEVITT LAUNCHES NEW RANGE OF HOMES DESIGNED BY POPOVBASS.

Iconic project home company Pettit+Sevitt, famous for their ground-breaking, mid-century modernist homes, has just launched a new collection of pre-designed homes in collaboration with award-winning architects PopovBass.

There are four modular designs in the series, each of which can be adapted to suit your space, lifestyle and site requirements:

- The Newline, a 3-bedroom home for level sites
- The Highline, a 2-storey, 4-bedroom home for level sites
- The Leanline, a 2-storey, 3-bedroom home for narrow sites, and
- The Splitline, a 2 or 3-level home suitable for sloping sites

Using the timeless principles of modernist design, a hallmark of Pettit+Sevitt homes built in the 1960s and 70s, the new range integrates many of the signature design features of the original models, such as white brick walls, exposed timber beams, ceiling-to-floor windows and light-filled open spaces.

“This is an affordable, high quality range of architect-designed homes for the 2020s and beyond,” according to Val Sevitt, whose late husband, Ron Sevitt, was a co-founder of the original company. “It is the perfect option for design-conscious homebuyers who don’t want to go to the expense of commissioning an architect for a one-off bespoke design.”
